

John:

The Safety Review itemizes, step by step, the process for product safety review and is proprietary.

The person at B&D responsible for this case is away until the end of the week. I'll discuss settlement with him and get back to you next week.

Regards,
Bob

You really think it meets the standard for a protective order? I think you have to justify that a little more. I think I wrote an article on this 10-15 years ago, "Confidentiality Orders: Plaintiffs Should Resist Them", or something like that, for Trial Magazine. I'd be a hypocrite to accept that out of laziness, and so . . .

Wanna settle the case? $50,000, now more hassle. And a confidentiality order.

John:

I now have the claim information and Safety Review which you requested at the deposition of Ted Mitrou. We wish to produce this material pursuant to a Protective Order as some of it relates to Confidential or proprietary material. Do you have a form of order which you would propose to use or should I draft one? We can then hand deliver the material to you.

Regards,
Bob
